

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

5

1. The first group of people who are interested in the results of the study are the researchers themselves. They want to know how well the study was conducted and whether the results are reliable.

2. The second group of people who are interested in the results of the study are the participants. They want to know how their data was used and whether their privacy was protected.

3. The third group of people who are interested in the results of the study are the funding agencies. They want to know whether the study was worth the money that they spent on it.

4. The fourth group of people who are interested in the results of the study are the general public. They want to know whether the study has any implications for them.

5. The fifth group of people who are interested in the results of the study are the media. They want to know whether the study has any news value.

6. The sixth group of people who are interested in the results of the study are the policy makers. They want to know whether the study has any implications for policy.

7. The seventh group of people who are interested in the results of the study are the academic community. They want to know whether the study has any implications for their own work.

8. The eighth group of people who are interested in the results of the study are the industry. They want to know whether the study has any implications for their business.

9. The ninth group of people who are interested in the results of the study are the government. They want to know whether the study has any implications for their policies.

10. The tenth group of people who are interested in the results of the study are the public. They want to know whether the study has any implications for them.